Mr. WILBERFORCE's SPEECH in the British House of Commons on the 3d of April. [Concluded from our laſt]

MR. Wilberforce adverted now to the treatment of the Negroes in the Middle paſſage—and here, in this ſtage of ſlavery, the cruelty of thoſe who were concerned in the trade was not in the ſmalleſt degree abated —An inſtance of this cruelty he begged leave to adduce to the attention of the Houſe —One of the Captains of the ſix ſhips (being loudly requeſted to name him he replied that his name was Capt Kimber) in whoſe conduct he had before animadverted, had a young negro girl on board his ſhip, about fifteen years of age. Being in a certain ſituation, which the influence of need fy made her wiſh to conceal, ſhe letnt forward—Captain Kimber, ſeizing her by the arm, caufed her two hands to be tied together, and ordered her to be ſeverely beat. He next tied her up by the legs, and beat her himſelf in the ſame cruel manner. He then ſuſpended her by one leg, in which ſituation ſhe remained for ſome time. The poor girl weakened by correction, and under the influence of extreme modeſty, ſeemed convulſed, in which ſtate ſhe remained three days, and then died. This was a tale that required to comment—and which, to excite univerſal abhorrence, needed but to be related. Now as the behaviour of Captain Kimber to his fellows more humane; out of the whole number of men taken on the voyage, only ſix returned to England. Having thus fully ſtated the nature of the trade itſelf, and the conſequences that attended it, he adverted to the defence that had been offered by thoſe who had been concerned in it. And indeed it was a curious circumſtance that theſe perſons attempted to ſhelter themſelves under the ſhield of Humanity. Waving, however, for a moment, the diſcuſſion of this argument, he begged the Houſe to recollect that he never had oppoſed the trade chiefly on the principle of cruelty. His firſt cauſe of oppoſition was that it was unjuſt. Religion taught him mercy, but religion taught him, firſt to obey the dictates of juſtice, whoever did not purſue this mode of conduct injured the cauſe which it might be his wiſh to ſupport.—On pretended principles of humanity Mahomet led his armies to the field to convert others to his faith. On the ſame principles was the inquiſition eſtabliſhed. The dictate of juſtice had been in ſome meaſure forgotten; but was it in the preſent caſe? No—Juſtice called aloud upon the Houſe to aboliſh the trade—The trade? Ill applied, indeed, was the appellation. No trade were the Houſe deſired to puniſh—but to expreſs their abhorrence of rapine, devaſtation, and barbarous murder.

Another defence which had been ſet up was, that the domeſtic ſituation of the Africans was not adapted to the purpoſes of happineſs.—The aſſertion was falſe, fortunately he was in poſſeſſion of ſufficient evidence to prove that it was ſo. A Dutch Governor of one of the forts in Africa has repreſented the Negroes of Arder, of Congo, and other places, to be employed in cultivation of rice and corn, and in ſpinning.—That their villages were numerous, and their manner of living harmonious peaceable and contented. Another author has repreſented other inhabitants of Africa as contaminated by their intercourſe with European Nations, by which they were employed in traverſing the country, ſeeking whom they might devour, that is, what helpleſs natives they could ſeize for the purpoſe of confining them to ſlavery. A third defence of the Slave Trade was that thoſe who were purchaſed would, if they were not purchaſed be made ſacrifices. On the exiſtence of this circumſtance a Captain Wilſon had been induced to enter into the cuſtom on minute inquiry it had been found that thoſe victims were Criminals. Wilſon proceeded had no affinity to ſacrifices, and that in fact no ſuch cuſtom had any exiſtence. Another argument on which the queſtion had been oppoſed was, that if Great Britain relinquiſhed the trade, other nations would carry it on with additional benefit.—This argument had in a former debate received ſuch a complete anſwer from Mr. Fox, that he ſhould only obſerve, that he had every reaſon to believe that other nations would follow the example of Great-Britain.—There were perſons who were diſpoſed to allow that the trade was cruel and unjuſt, but at the ſame time they oppoſed the abolition of it, becauſe they maintained it to be inconſiſtent with the political intereſts of the country.—This was a kind of argument of which he begged leave to expreſs his utmoſt abhorrence.—For, applying it to private life, how would ſuch an excuſe be admitted from any one, that forſooth, he would forſake ſlow and ſuch improper paſſions, if ſuch a dereliction of them were not inconſiſtent with his intereſts?——Having thus, he flattered himſelf, ſufficiently ſhewn the neceſſity of an abolition, he contended that the preſent was the proper period. Now, while Great-Britain was enjoying ſuch happineſs her ſons ſhould recollect how ſmall a portion of what they enjoyed would alter their ſituation, and make it comfortable and happy.

In the progreſs of this diſcuſſion, it had afforded him infinite pleaſure that ſeveral who on other occaſions maintained different opinions, on this ſubject were unanimous. On other political diſquiſitions the loweſt atmoſphere was diſturbed by storms, and agitated by convulſions. On this diſcuſſion, however, they ſoared into a pure region.

As ſome tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Pierces the clouds and mocks the ſtorm,
Tho' round its baſe ſome thunders rude may ſpread,
Eternal ſunſhine ſettles on its head.

Mr. Wilberforce now adverted to the ſettlement at Sierra Leone; of which circumſtance he begged leave to congratulate the country. He could aſſure, even on Africa, a ſpirit of liberty, and even on that ſhore, a diſpoſition of one ſpot was diſcovered where it very early not in vain to riſe.—For it had been ſaid that the trade ſhould not be aboliſhed, becauſe the negroes having no feeling, did not know that they were wretched.—Would to God it were the caſe!—But it was not.—They poſſeſſed feelings as exquiſite as the inhabitants of this country; nay, though leſs cultivated, more exquiſite. It might be aſked, that if it was Great Britain who had ſtarted a ſcene of ſo tragic a nature, to demand only an act of humanity, in an eaſy way, that it was the moſt unpardonable cowardice, if we ſhould recede from the meaſure in conſequence of the reſiſtance we met with. Mr. WILBERFORCE's SPEECH in the British House of Commons on the 3d of April. [Concluded from our laſt.]

MR. Being in a ſituation, which the influence of modeſty made her wiſh to conceal, ſhe leant forward—Captain Kimber, ſeizing her by the arm, cauſed her two hands to be tied together, and ordered her to be ſeverely beat. He next tied her up by the legs, and beat her himſelf in the ſame cruel manner. He then ſuſpended her by one leg, in which ſituation ſhe remained for ſome time. The poor girl weakened by correction, and under the influence of extreme modeſty, fell into convulſions, in which ſtate ſhe remained three days, and then died. This was a tale that required to comment—and which, to excite univerſal abhorrence, needed but to be related. Nor was the behaviour of Captain Kimber to his ſailors more humane; out of the uſual number of men taken on the voyage, only ſix returned to England. Having thus fully ſtated the nature of the trade itſelf, and the conſequences that attended it, he adverted to the defence that had been offered by thoſe who had been concerned in it. Not a trade were the Houſe deſired to put an end to, but to expreſs their abhorrence of rapine, devaſtation, deſolation and murder.

Another defence which had been ſet up was, that the domeſtic ſituation of the Africans was not adapted to the purpoſes of happineſs.—The aſſertion was falſe, fortunately he was in poſſeſſion of ſufficient evidence to prove that it was ſo. A Dutch Governor of one of the forts in Africa has repreſented the Negroes of Africa, of Congo, and other places, to be employed in cultivation of rice and corn, and in fiſhing.—That their villages were numerous, and their manner of living harmonious, peaceable and contented. Another author has repreſented other inhabitants of Africa as contaminated by their connexion with European Nations, by which they were employed in traverſing the country, ſeeking whom they might devour, that is, what helpleſs natives they could ſeize for the purpoſe of confining them to ſlavery. A third defence of the Slave Trade was that thoſe who were purchaſed would, if they were not purchaſed be made ſacrifices. On the exiſtence of this circumſtance a Captain Wilſon had been induced to enter into the trade but on minute inquiry it had been found that thoſe data, on which Capt. Wilſon proceeded had not the ſmalleſt analogy to ſacrifices, and that in fact no ſuch cuſtom had any exiſtence. Another argument on which the abolition had been oppoſed was, that if Great Britain relinquiſhed the trade, other nations would carry it on with additional benefit.—This argument had in a former debate received ſuch a complete anſwer from Mr. Fox, that he ſhould only obſerve, that he had every reaſon to believe that other nations would follow the example of Great-Britain.—There were perſons who were diſpoſed to allow that the trade was cruel and unjuſt, but at the ſame time they oppoſed the abolition of it, becauſe they maintained it to be inconſiſtent with the political intereſts of the country.—This was a kind of argument of which he begged leave to expreſs his utmoſt abhorrence.—For, applying it to private life, how would ſuch an excuſe be admitted from any one, that forſooth, he would forſake ſuch and ſuch improper purſuits, if ſuch a dereliction of them were not inconſiſtent with his intereſts?——Having thus, he flattered himſelf, ſufficiently ſhewn the neceſſity of an abolition, he contended that the preſent was the proper period. In the progreſs of this diſcuſſion, it had afforded him infinite pleaſure that ſeveral who on other occaſions maintained different opinions, on this ſubject were unanimous. On other political diſquiſitions the loweſt atmoſphere was diſturbed by ſtorms, and agitated by convulſions. On this diſcuſſion, however, they ſoared into a pure region.

As ſome tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Pierces the clouds, and midway leaves the ſtorm,
Tho' round its baſe ſome billows rude may ſpread,
Eternal ſunſhine ſettles on its head.

Mr. Wilberforce now adverted to the ſettlement at Sierra Leone; on this circumſtance he begged leave to congratulate the country. They had planted, even on Africa, a ſprig of liberty, and even on that ſhore, poſſeſſion of one ſpot was obtained where ſlavery dared not intrude with baneful treat.—But it had been ſaid that the trade ſhould not be aboliſhed, becauſe the negroes having no feelings, did not know that they were wretched—Alas! would indeed this were the caſe!—But it was not.—They poſſeſſed feelings as exquiſite as the inhabitants of this country; nay, it might be ſaid, more exquiſite. It might be ſaid, that it was Great-Britain who betrayed a want of feeling in thus refuſing to do not only an act of humanity, but an act of juſtice. After declaring, that even if he ſhould be diſappointed in his preſent attempt, he would not recede from his endeavours to gain abolition of the ſlave trade ſhould he obtained; he concluded by declaring, that the motions he intended to make varied in a ſmall degree from the motions he had made laſt year. This mode of conduct he was induced to adopt in order to meet the wiſhes of thoſe who conceive that ſome time ought to be allowed before a total abolition ought to take place. At the ſame time he thought it neceſſary to declare, that his own opinion, with reſpect to an immediate abolition, was not in the ſmalleſt degree changed. The motions he ſhould make were,

1ſt. That it is the opinion of the committee, that the ſlave trade carried on by this country ought to be aboliſhed.—And the 2d was, That the Chairman ſhould move for leave to bring in a bill to procure an abolition of it.

The COLLECTION, No. IV.

THERE is a peculiar phraſe which the generality of people uſe, as a deſcription of what would eſtabliſh their happineſs, that is, to have the neceſſaries of life. If we examine this expreſſion, of the neceſſaries of life, how plain it ſeems, yet how undetermined is its meaning, few annexing the ſame ideas to the ſound of the words. The antient philoſophers reſtrained this phraſe within a narrow compaſs, and meant only by it to have courſe victuals and a plain garb. What was ſufficient to ſupport life, they thought was alone neceſſary to it. Diogenes particularly comprized all his neceſſaries in a ſcrip to hold his meat, and a bowl to drink out of; yet even here he found a ſuperfluity; for ſeeing a boy one day on a river ſide ſucking up water out of the hollow of his hand, he with great indignation threw away his bowl as an unneceſſary burthen. Nature requires but a few neceſſaries; it would be prudent therefore not to raiſe imaginary wants. If we view the follies of thoſe more affluent than ourſelves, we ſhould make their eſtates moderate our ambitious deſires; which inſtead of being neceſſary to contentment are too often attended with diſquietude. We ſhould change the proſpect and then we ſhould immediately behold thouſands of unhappy fellow creatures, among whom the neceſſaries of life are truly wanting. The moderation of our deſires can alone give an idea of what is neceſſary or ſuperfluous; and he is more rich whoſe wiſhes are bounded by his fortune, than he who poſſeſſing empires ſtill deſires ſomewhat more;

For that ſame ſomething unpoſſeſs'd,
Corrodes and leavens all the reſt.

Of all wiſhes as to fortune, "Give me neither poverty nor riches," ſeems the beſt calculated for true happineſs.

Shall he alone whom rational we call,
Be pleas'd with nothing if not bleſs'd with all?

WARSAW, April 4.

PREPARATIONS are making for celebrating the firſt anniverſary of the happy revolution, on the 3d of May next, with the greateſt ſolemnity; and there will not only be a camp formed at the time near Warſaw, of 9000 men, under Prince Louis, of Wirtemburg, or Prince Poniatowſky, the King's Nephew, but an event, as extraordinary, as it will be remarkable, will, it is reported, take place on that day. What this is we do not preſume to predict.

LONDON, April 23.

The French government, with admirable vigilance, for the public intereſt, are endeavouring to aſcertain the number of their ſubjects reſiding in foreign countries, their quality, their loſſes by the revolution, and their preſent property. A gentleman, commiſſioned to make theſe inquiries in England arrived in town on Wedneſday night, from Paris.

May 3. Orders have been actually ſent from Paris for a body of troops to march to Dunkirk immediately and to be reinforced by about 4000 men in garriſon there. The ſituation of Dunkirk is ſo near, as to be not more than ſix hours quick march to Oſtend, which is very weakly garriſoned, and could not reſiſt any regular attack from a large body of force. The orders given have been ſo peremptory to make the greateſt diſpatch, that we may expect to hear every day of the French troops being before that place. The policy of this attack is evident, and could not be better conceived. The French, by taking Oſtend, will deſtroy the neſt of privateers which are fitting out there with the greateſt alacrity, and muſt injure French trade very materially.

Tranſlated from LA CHRONIQUE DE PARIS, a periodical publication, under the direction of fourteen gentlemen, of the firſt reputation in Paris, and among them M. CONDORCET.

Relative ſituation of the Belligerent Powers.

GOOD citizens, who make up a reſpectable majority of the nation, appear at this time to entertain no fears from the impending invaſion of the armies of Auſtria and Pruſſia. What ſtrengthens them in their opinion, is, that the greater the number of our officers that deſert, the more our public reſources encreaſe, and money becomes more plenty.

But many heads of families, many young, timorous, yet, patriotic women, look upon the emigrants, even without foreign aid, ſpurred on by ambition, ready to fall upon France, and already before Paris. Upon the beſt calculation, our timid merchants ſuppoſe them to amount to thirty thouſand men.

I have thought it might be uſeful to place before them, a comparative account of the armies of interior and exterior France, founded on information received from the frontiers and Coblenz.

Knights of the Holy Ghoſt.

Interior France. None.
Exterior France. Forty.

Field Officers.

Interior France. One hundred and fifty.
Exterior France. Five hundred and fifty nine.

Infantry.

Interior France. Four hundred battalions, upon the war eſtabliſhment.

Exterior France. One battalion and a half on the peace eſtabliſhment.

Cavalry.

Interior France. Two hundred and twenty battalions.

Exterior France. The Life Guards, the company of Auvergne, and ſix hundred naval officers on horſeback.

Artillery.

Interior France. Ten thouſand men, two battering trains of Artillery, three field equipages, eight thouſand horſe.

Exterior France. Two pieces of three inch bore, bought of the Counteſs of Bickenburgh. Moreover, the artillery of His Highneſs My Lord Cardinal of Rohan, conſiſting of three pieces of three and a half inches bore. No horſe. The whole artillery is conveyed and managed by Nobleмen.

Proviſions.

Internal France. 500,000 bags of grain, enough to ſerve 250,000 men for one year. Forage for 60,000 horſe for ſix months; and 9,000 horſes for the tranſportation of proviſions.

Exterior France. Daily bread.

Camp Equipage.

Interior France. Tents, &c. for 250,000 men.
Exterior France, The canopy of Heaven.

Finances.

Interior France. 2,300,000,000 in national domains, and 10,000,000 in ſpecie in the public treaſury.

External France. The credit of the Empreſs of Ruſſia; preſent from the Swediſh Diet; contingent of the King of Sardinia; pious legacy of Leopold; alms of the King of Spain; ſavings of the Cardinal of Rohan.

From this ſtatement, until the armies are in ſight of each other, we may do buſineſs, and ſleep in perfect ſecurity in Paris.

LATE
European Intelligence,

Brought by the Packet Chesterfield, Capt. Jones, arrived at New-York from Falmouth, and the Ship Olive-Branch, Captain Caulder, from London, arrived at Boston:

COBLENTZ, April 17.

IT is said, that yesterday a messenger arrived from M. Dumouriez, the French Minister, with despatches to our Elector, requiring him to give an immediate and categorical answer to the question "Whether the Elector acknowledges the present Constitution of France as the true and only Constitution of France or not?" This question is said with a threat, that if the Elector does not acknowledge the present Constitution of France, that nation will oblige him to do it. The same message was sent to Mentz, and in consequence, couriers have been sent to two great Powers.

April 20. The Count d'Artois is preparing his camp equipage, and the Prince de Conde will very shortly make his appearance at the head of 30,000 of his countrymen.

The Pairs au Royaume and the Parliamentarians have their rendezvous at Coblentz, where the Princes have ordered a convocation of the Pairs, whose intention is to put the King under Curatelle (as incapable of managing the affairs of the kingdom) and appoint Monsieur, Regent of the Kingdom, and Count d'Artois Generalissimo of the forces.

Paris, April 25. The most productive orders have been issued for the troops to march. General Luckner is to take possession of the defiles of Perentui, conformably with the treaty between France and the Bishop of Balle. The centre army, reinforced with a detachment from that of the north, is to advance towards Luxemburgh. M. de Rochambeau is to march towards Mons—Van der Merth has accepted a post in the French army, he acts as Marshal de Camp.

May 10. M. De Grave, Minister at War, has resigned. He is to be succeeded by M. Servan, Colonel of the 104th regiment.

NATIONAL LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, April 23.

M. Bazet moved "That the decree by which the Members of the August Diet have agreed to sacrifice one third of their wages for three months towards the expences of the war, be repealed." This motion was productive of a tumultuous scene which lasted several hours, and to the astonishment of all men who have some regard for consistency, the decree was repealed accordingly.

Evening Sitting.

M. Colou moved that the subscription be opened for the contributions of the Legislators towards the expences of the war. He added that already 68 deputies have agreed to subscribe.

The heroes of the Bastile, with M. Dussaulx at their head, came to make an offer to fly to the frontiers to the conquest of the enemies of the Constitution.——They requested to bear on their colours an inverted tower, in allusion to their success in demolishing the Bastile. It was thought prudent to refuse this favour.

Sunday, May 6.

A person offered a discovery of an air balloon, that would carry two hundred men, furnished with forty-eight pounders. The inventer was referred to the Committee of Arts.

Monday, May 7.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs read extracts from several despatches from the French Ministers at Foreign Courts to the following effect:

London, April 28.—The care of the Minister to keep up the price of the funds, and the general disposition of the nation, assures us of the neutrality of England.

Wertemberg.—The Duke has refused to furnish 8000 troops, which the Court of Vienna applied for, with a promise to protect his States from invasion.

Munich, May 1.—The most positive assurances of a perfect neutrality.

Stockholm, April 20.—The new government has resolved to declare to all the Courts of Europe, that Sweden adopts a pacific system. Nothing is to be apprehended, but that Russia should require the execution of the treaty entered into with her.

Spain.—The conduct of M. d'Aranda is more and more favourable to the French. Reparation is now made to such of them as had been injured by the former Ministers.

It was observed that none of these despatches were signed, and the Assembly passed to the order of the day.

Tuesday, May 8.

An address was voted, entitled, "The Representatives of the French People to the Citizens armed for the Defence of their Country. It recommends discipline in very earnest terms to the soldiers, and adds, "For ourselves, unshaken in the midst of political tempests, we will be on the watch against all plots and all the enemies of the empire. The world shall see whether we are the representatives of a great people, or the timid subjects of some of the Kings of Europe. We have sworn never to capitulate with pride or tyranny. We will keep our oath—Death, death, or victory and equality."

Ordered, that the Executive Power inform the Assembly, every eight days, of the inquiries made into the assassinations committed at Lisle, of General Dillon and other officers.

M. Duham said nine persons were already in custody on that account; and that, on the 2d instant, a spy was apprehended at Mons, who was proved to have cried, "Save himself who can," in the affair of Moths.

May 13.—(Evening)

Sitting Extraordinary.

The War Minister informed the Assembly, that the whole regiment de Saxe has deserted and is gone over to the enemy.

Read a letter from the Mayor of Thionville, containing information that three squadrons of the Regiment of de Berchini have also deserted. The fugitives had taken two guidons with them; but they were pursued by a Marechal de Logis, who brought back one of the guidons.

M. Cambon complained of the want of arms for preserving the interior tranquility of the Kingdom. He said that of the small quantity in France, several were exported to arm its enemies.

May 14.

M. Servan gave alarming accounts of the number of troops which continue to desert. He said spies sent by General Kellerman into the enemies territories, have brought certain information, that 80,000 men are daily expected in the environs of Mayence. It seems to be the object of the commanders of those armies from the plans which they have adopted, to fix their quarters, with in six weeks, in the very centre of the kingdom; but he added, that there was no reason to be discouraged. He demanded that a severe law be passed to prevent desertion, and to deter officers from resigning their commissions. He said that the Post Masters in Alsace entirely refuse to take any Assignats.

May 16.—(Evening)

The War Minister informed the Assembly that 92 soldiers of the Regiment de Saxe and 88 horses have been brought back to France. The Marechal des Logis, by whose means they have been brought back, was instantly promoted by General Kellerman, to the rank of an officer.

M. Isnard made a very spirited harrangue.—He concluded by moving, having previously asserted that the country is in danger—that the Legislature shall meet in some private place, on those evenings when there is no sitting; and that a message be sent to the King, desiring him to declare whether he loves or hates the Constitution, and whether he means to support or destroy it.

The Order of the Day.

Decreed that the 300,000,000 of assignats lately issued, shall be exclusively appropriated to defray the expenses of the War.

May, 17.

M. de LUCKNER was to set out yesterday for the army of M. ROCHAMBEAU, who has resigned.

M. D'ESTAING, has succeeded Marshal ROCHAMBEAU, as commander of the French troops intended to act against the Austrian Netherlands.

LONDON, May 7.

ATTEMPT UPON MONS.

Letters were received yesterday by government, stating that the attempt was made on the 29th of April by M. de Biron, at the head of between eight and nine thousand men, with twenty four pieces of cannon.—The place was reported to be badly fortified, and from the disposition of its inhabitants it was expected that it would surrender. But the contrary was found to be the fact, for between six and seven thousand Austrians appeared in defence of it, and after a very little firing the Queen's Regiment, which was in the centre of the French army, gave way;—and the Commander in Chief fled—so early in the combat that the letters state the Austrians were astonished,—they however pursued the runaways, and the Austrian cavalry killed between seven and eight hundred. Rochambeau's loss is said to have fallen among the slain.

On the same day a similar attempt was made to capture Tournay, by a body of French troops, commanded by General Dillon, which also failed—The French suffering a loss of near 400 men, their baggage, tents &c.—When the retreating army reached Lisle, suspecting their Commander of treachery, the soldiery most inhumanly cut him to pieces with their sabres, without the form of a trial. Mr. de Biron is also suspected of treachery.

After the soldiers and mob had murdered General Dillon, at Lisle, and threw his body into a bonfire, they made a ring, and imitating the savages of America, danced round the flame, singing aloud, that such was the proper reward of traitors. Such are the first public acts of the soldiery of France under the new Constitution.

The brother of the unfortunate Dillon has petitioned the Assembly, who are determined to employ the most effectual means for the discovery and punishment of the assassins.

May 15. On Saturday morning, the Courier returned from Berlin, brought information that the King of Prussia had issued orders for 70,000 men to march, of which he was himself to take the command. The advanced guard was already in motion. No great dependence is, however, placed on Prussia. People here seem to be convinced, that her operations will be guided by interested motives, even to the detriment of Austria, were the once sure of striking a decisive blow.

May 21. Prince Hohenlos is gone to the Duke of Brunswick, to confer with him on the plan to be followed by the combined armies of Prussia and Austria. The Prince is to command the Austrian and Hessian army on the Rhine;—the Duke, the Prussian and Austrian army in Flanders. The Landgrave of Hesse is to send 12 regiments to the Elector of Treves. General Brown will command the Austrian army in Flanders, under the Duke of Brunswick.

A considerable force is arming at Brest, to protect the French Trade in the Mediterranean.

The Prussian troops in the circle of Westphalia, have orders to join General Bender at the very first notice.

In a short debate, which occured lately, in the National Assembly of France, after the proposal of War, a sally of one member produced much applause—When "Francis the First" was read, as the name of the King of Hungary, "Read," said he, "Francis the LAST, for there will be no more Kings of Hungary."

The Monf. Dillon, who was so cruelly assassinated by the populace at Lisle, is not the handsome beau Dillon, as was reported, but his cousin Count Theobald Dillon.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.

On Sunday morning departed this life very suddenly Mrs. Gray, a black woman, wife of Mr. William Gray, a black man—and on Monday her remains preceded by the Right Rev. Bishop White, and the Rev. Dr. Blackwell were deposited in the silent grave in Potter's Field, being attended thither by a numerous concourse of people of her own color, and a very respectable procession of white citizens.

This pleasing instance of total indifference to complexion, tho' on a melancholy occasion, must prove a grateful piece of intelligence to those inhabitants of the United States, who to their own credit have for years past espoused the cause of the African race, notwithstanding all persecution to which they have been exposed from the less humane—A happy presage of the time, fast approaching, when the important declaration in holy writ will be fully verified, that "God hath made of one blood, all the nations of the earth."

Mrs. Gray was an amiable and in every respect a good woman—her neighbours held her in high esteem—and all who knew her sincerely lament her loss.

Extract of a letter from Aux Cayes, May 1.

"Our plain of Aux Cayes, is, in a great measure untouched, with 500 men to cover the country, we shall this year, still be able to make eight millions of pounds of sugar; the insurrection is not general, and order would therefore be easily restored."

June 27. Some counterfeit certificates of the funded debt of Pennsylvania having been lately detected, the public have been cautioned by the Comptroller General to beware of such as may be offered for sale.

On Tuesday the 19th inst. arrived at Wilmington (Delaware) the ship Wilmington, Capt. Jeffries, in 37 days from Bristol, with upwards of 500 tons.

June 29. On Tuesday last the ship Cayes, Capt. Meath, sailed from this port for Harbadoes. In this ship went passenger the honorable Mr. Pinckney, minister from the United States, to the court of St. James, it is the intention of that gentleman to land at Dover.

ELIZABETH-TOWN, June 27.

Monday last the corner stone of a structure, intended as an Academy, was laid at Newark, with much ceremony, amid the acclamations of a large number of the inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood. The building, it is said, will, when finished, for convenience and elegance, vie with any building of the like nature in America.

MIDDLETOWN, June 30.

By accounts from various parts of this State, English grain was never in higher perfection, at this season—A head of Rye in this town is seven feet high on an average.

NEW-LONDON, July 5.

By the sloop Swallow, Capt. Fitch, who arrived here on Thursday last in 23 days from St. Pierre in Martinico, we learn, that while he was there a dispute arose between the Captain of a ship of war and the Captain of a merchant ship, both Frenchmen, which produced a rencounter on shore, in which the Captain of the ship of war was badly wounded in the hand—and had ordered the Captain of the merchantman into goal;—that in consequence of this dispute all the ships on that station were sent for, and had arrived at St. Pierre;—and that the day before the Swallow left St. Pierre, the Mulattoes had armed and embodied in the back part of the town.

The brig Commerce, Capt McIntyre, has been seized at Philadelphia for importing two casks of spirituous liquors of less capacity than 50 gallons, contrary to the Act of Congress passed the 6th day of Dec. 1790.

No country under Heaven pays more attention to education than the people of Connecticut; there is not a village or hamlet, however small, but in it you will find a school house and a teacher. Nor is there any country which affords motives equally cogent for the acquisition of learning. Here the people (with some few exceptions) enjoy an equal distribution of property, destitute of titulary dignity and devoid of ancestral pride, they start fair for the temple of fame; and the son of the humble peasant may one day find himself in the seat of the chief magistrate of a sovereign state.

Judge Powel of Canada, is now prisoner at Quebec on a charge of high treason: letters, it is said, having been detected, written in his name and hand, giving information to his friends in the United States, how Detroit may be easily carried.

Mr. Vining has informed the people of Delaware that he declines being chosen member of Congress for that State at the next election—John Dickinson, Esq. has also declined being elected Governor of that State.

LATE
European Intelligence,

Brought by the Packet Chesterfield, Capt. Jones, arrived at New-York from Falmouth, and the Ship Olive-Branch, Captain Caulder, from London, arrived at Boston:

COBLENTZ, April 17.

IT is said, that yesterday a messenger arrived from M. Dumourier, the French Minister, with despatches to our Elector, requiring him to give an immediate and categorical answer to the question "Whether the Elector acknowledges the present Constitution as the true and only Constitution of France or not?" This question is asked with a threat, that if the Elector does not acknowledge the present Constitution of France, that nation will oblige him to do it. The same message was sent to Mentz, and in consequence, couriers have been sent to two great Powers.

April 20. The Count d'Artois is preparing his camp equipage, and the Prince de Conde will very shortly make his appearance at the head of 30,000 of his countrymen.

The Pairs au Royaume and the Parliamentarians have their rendezvous at Coblentz, where the Princes have ordered a convocation of the Pairs, whose intention is to put the King under Curatelle (as incapable of managing the affairs of the kingdom) and appoint Monsieur, Regent of the Kingdom, and Count d'Artois Generalissimo of the forces.

Paris, April 25. The most productive orders have been issued for the troops to march. General Luckner is to take possession of the defiles of Porentui, conformably with the treaty between France and the Bishop of Balle. The centre army, reinforced with a detachment from that of the north, is to advance towards Luxemburgh. M. de Rochambeau is to march towards Mons—Van der Mersh has accepted a post in the French army, he acts as Marshal de Camp.

May 10. M. De Grave, Minister at War, has resigned. He is to be succeeded by M. Servan, Colonel of the 104th regiment.

NATIONAL LEGISLATIVE ASSEMELY.

Monday, April 23.

M. Bazier moved "That the decree by which the Members of the August Diet have agreed to sacrifice one third of their wages for three months towards the expenses of the war, be repealed." This motion was productive of a tumultuous scene which lasted several hours, and to the astonishment of all men who have some regard for consistency, the decree was repealed accordingly.

Evening Sitting.

M. Colou moved that the subscription be opened for the contributions of the Legislators towards the expenses of the war. He added that already 68 deputies have agreed to subscribe.

The heroes of the Bastile, with M. Dussaulx at their head, came to make an offer to fly to the frontiers to the conquest of the enemies of the Constitution.——They requested to bear on their colours an inverted tower, in allusion to their process in demolishing the Bastile. It was thought prudent to refuse this favour.

Sunday, May 6.

A person offered a discovery of an air balloon, that would carry two hundred men, furnished with forty-eight pounders. The inventer was referred to the Committee of Arts.

Monday, May 7.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs read extracts from several despatches from the French Ministers at Foreign Courts to the following effect:

London, April 28.—The care of the Minister to keep up the price of the funds, and the general disposition of the nation, assures us of the neutrality of England.

Wertemberg.—The Duke has refused to furnish 8000 troops, which the Court of Vienna applied for, with a promise to protect his States from invasion.

Munich, May 1.—The most positive assurances of a perfect neutrality.

Stockholm, April 20.—The new government has resolved to declare to all the Courts of Europe, that Sweden adopts a pacific system. Nothing is to be apprehended, but that Russia should require the execution of the treaty entered into with her.

Spain.—The conduct of M. d'Aranda is more and more favourable to the French. Reparation is now made to such of them as had been injured by the former Minister.

It was observed that none of these despatches were signed, and the Assembly passed to the order of the day.

Tuesday, May 8.

An address was voted, entitled, "The Representatives of the French People to the Citizens armed for the Defence of their Country. It recommends discipline in very earnest terms to the soldiers, and adds, "For ourselves, unshaken in the midst of political tempests, we will be on the watch against all plots and all the enemies of the empire. The world shall see whether we are the representatives of a great people, or the timid subjects of some of the Kings of Europe. We have sworn never to capitulate with pride or tyranny. We will keep our oath—Death, death, or victory and equality."

Ordered, that the Executive Power inform the Assembly, every eight days, of the inquiries made into the assassinations committed at Lisle, of General Dillon and other officers.

M. Duham said nine persons were already in custody on that account; and that, on the 2d instant, a spy was apprehended at Mons, who was proved to have cried, "Save himself who can," in the affair of Moths.

May 13.—(Evening)

Sitting Extraordinary.

The War Minister informed the Assembly, that the whole regiment de Saxe has deserted and is gone over to the enemy.

Read a letter from the Mayor of Thionville, containing information that three squadrons of the Regiment of de Berchini have also deserted. The soldiers had taken two guidons with them; but they were pursued by a Marechal de Logis, who brought back one of the guidons.

M. Cambon complained of the want of arms for preserving the interior tranquility of the Kingdom. He said that of the small quantity in France, several were exported to arm its enemies.

May 14.

M. Servan gave alarming accounts of the number of troops which continue to desert. He said spies sent by General Kellerman into the enemies territories, have brought certain information, that 80,000 men are daily expected in the environs of Mayence. It seems to be the object of the commanders of those armies from the plans which they have adopted, to fix their quarters, within six weeks, in the very centre of the kingdom; but he added, that there was no reason to be discouraged. He demanded that a severe law be passed to prevent desertion, and to deter officers from resigning their commissions. He said that the Post Masters in Alsace entirely refuse to take any Assignats.

May 16.—(Evening)

The War Minister informed the Assembly that 92 soldiers of the Regiment de Saxe and 88 horses have been brought back to France. The Marechal des Logis, by whose means they have been brought back, was instantly promoted by General Kellerman, to the rank of an officer.

M. Isnard made a very spirited harrangue.—He concluded by moving, having previously asserted that the country is in danger—that the Legislature shall meet in some private place, on those evenings when there is no sitting; and that a message be sent to the King, desiring him to declare whether he loves or hates the Constitution, and whether he means to support or destroy it.

The Order of the Day.

Decreed that the 300,000,000 of assignats lately issued, shall be exclusively appropriated to defray the expenses of the War.

MAY, 17.

M. de LUCKNER was to set out yesterday for the army of M. KOCHAMBEAU, who has resigned.

M. D'ESTAING, has succeeded Marshal KOCHAMBEAU, as commander of the French troops intended to act against the Austrian Netherlands.

LONDON, May 7.

ATTEMPT UPON MONS.

Letters were received yesterday by government, stating that the attempt was made on the 29th of April by M. de Biron, at the head of between eight and nine thousand men, with twenty four pieces of cannon.—The place was reported to be badly fortified, and from the disposition of its inhabitants it was expected that it would surrender. But the contrary was found to be the fact, for between six and seven thousand Austrians appeared in defence of it, and after a very little firing the Queen's Regiment, which was in the centre of the French army, gave way;—and the Commander in Chief fled—so early in the combat that the letters state the Austrians were astonished,—they however pursued the runaways, and the Austrian cavalry killed between seven and eight hundred. Rochambeau's son is said to have fallen among the slain.

On the same day a similar attempt was made to capture Tournay, by a body of French troops, commanded by General Dillon, which also failed—The French suffering a loss of near 400 men, their baggage, tents &c.—When the retreating army reached Lisle, suspecting their Commander of treachery, the soldiery most inhumanly cut him to pieces with their sabres, without the form of a trial. Mr. de Biron is also suspected of treachery.

After the soldiers and mob had murdered General Dillon, at Lisle, and threw his body into a bonfire, they made a ring, and imitating the savages of America, danced round the flame, singing aloud, that such was the proper reward of traitors. Such are the first public acts of the soldiery of France under the new Constitution.

The brother of the unfortunate Dillon has petitioned the Assembly, who are determined to employ the most effectual means for the discovery and punishment of the assassins.

May 15. On Saturday morning, the Courier returned from Berlin, brought information that the King of Prussia had issued orders for 70,000 men to march, of which he was himself to take the command. The advanced guard was already in motion. No great dependence is, however, placed on Prussia. People here seem to be convinced, that her operations will be guided by interested motives, even to the detrement of Austria, were she once sure of striking a decisive blow.

May 21. Prince Hohenlos is gone to the Duke of Brunswick, to confer with him on the plan to be followed by the combined armies of Prussia and Austria. The Prince is to command the Austrian and Hessian army on the Rhine;—the Duke, the Prussian and Austrian army in Flanders. The Landgrave of Hesse is to send 12 regiments to the Elector of Treves. General Brown will command the Austrian army in Flanders, under the Duke of Brunswick.

A considerable force is arming at Brest, to protect the French Trade in the Mediterranean.

The Prussian troops in the circle of Westphalia, have orders to join General Bender at the very first notice.

In a short debate, which occured lately, in the National Assembly of France, after the proposal of War, a sally of one member produced much applause—When "Francis the First" was read, as the name of the King of Hungary, "Read," said he, "Francis the LAST, for there will be no more Kings of Hungary."

The Monsr. Dillon, who was so cruelly assassinated by the populace at Lisle, is not the handsome beau Dillon, as was reported, but his cousin Count Theobald Dillon.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.

On Sunday morning departed this life very suddenly Mrs. Gray, a black woman, wife of Mr. William Gray, a black man—and on Monday her remains preceded by the Right Rev. Bishop White, and the Rev. Dr. Blackwell were deposited in the silent grave in Potter's Field, being attended thither by a numerous concourse of people of her own color, and a very respectable procession of white citizens.

This pleasing instance of total indifference to complexion, tho' on a melancholy occasion, must prove a grateful piece of intelligence to those inhabitants of the United States, who to their own credit have for years past espoused the cause of the African race, notwithstanding all persecution to which they have been exposed from the less humane—A happy presage of the time, fast approaching, when the important declaration in holy writ will be fully verified, that "God hath made of one blood, all the nations of the earth."

Mrs. Gray was an amiable and in every respect a good woman—her neighbours held her in high esteem—and all who knew her sincerely lament her loss.

Extract of a letter from Aux-Cayes, May 1.

"Our plain of Aux Cayes, is, in a great measure untouched, with 500 men to cover the country, we shall this year, still be able to make eight millions of pounds of sugar; the insurrection is not general, and order would therefore be easily restored."

June 27. Some counterfeit certificates of the funded debt of Pennsylvania having been lately detected, the public have been cautioned by the Comptroller General to beware of such as may be offered for sale.

On Tuesday the 19th inst. arrived at Wilmington (Delaware) the ship Wilmington, Capt. Jeffries, in 37 days from Belfast, with upwards of 500 souls.

June 29. On Tuesday last the ship Cayes, Capt. Marsh, sailed from this port for Hamburg. In this ship went passenger the honorable Mr. Pinckney, minister from the United States, to the court of St. James. It is the intention of that gentleman to land at Dover.

ELIZABETH-TOWN, June 27.

Monday last the corner stone of a structure, intended as an Academy, was laid at Newark, with much ceremony, amid the acclamations of a large number of the inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood. The building, it is said, will, when finished, for convenience and elegance, vie with any building of the like nature in America.

MIDDLETOWN, June 30.

By accounts from various parts of this state, English grain was never in higher perfection, at this season—A field of Rye in this town is seven feet high on an average.

NEW-LONDON, July 5.

BOSTON, July 7.

Assassinations have not stopped in Sweden.—an English paper of May 22, announces the confirmation of the report of the assassination of the Duke of Sudermania—Regent of Sweden.

A gentleman immediately from Europe, assures us that the actions fought by the Austrians and French in Flanders were no farther prejudical to the latter, than as they gave occasion for the cruel massacre of Gen. Dillon, and two or three other officers.

PROVIDENCE, July 7.

Extract of a Letter from Mr. John Rogers, Supercargo of the Ship Rising Sun, bound from this Port to Bombay and Canton, dated March 2, Lat. 2 N. Long. 24 W.

"An Opportunity presenting, I with Pleasure embrace it, to inform you of our being thus far on our Way to Bombay.—After we had left Warwick Neck, on Sunday Morning the 15th of January, we were favoured with a continued Succession of fair Winds, without tacking or wearing Ship in four Weeks.—On the 9th of February we made St Antonio, the Northwesternmost of the Cape de Verd Islands. We now flatter ourselves with having approached the South east Trades. The Ship proves very tight, and is furnished with a very good Crew, who are all in perfect Health."

The Ship Hamilton, Capt. Redman, and the Brig Samuel, Capt. Andrews, of this Port, are arrived at Copenhagen.—Capt. Peirce, of New-York, and Capt. Wood, of Newport, are arrived at the same Place.

NEWPORT, July 9.

For the NEWPORT MERCURY.

ADMONITORY.

WHEN the "Prince of Peace," the great and good Author of Christianity, was questioned about the principles of Religion, he declares it to be founded on Love itself: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another." When asked whether a man was obliged to forgive his brother more than seven times? "I tell you," says our Lord, with emphatic vehemence, "more than seventy times seven." When his disciples, heated with a little of that spirit which has blazened out so furiously since in their unworthy successors, wanted to call down fire from Heaven upon the inhospitable and heretic Samaritans, our Lord most fitted their kindled zeal with this reproof, "ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of; for the son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." The examples of unlimited love and forbearance which, in the sacred writings, are given of our beneficent Redeemer, should ever influence us in our demeanour to one another.

Ever reflecting with gratitude on that love which was stronger than death, and which from impending ruin snatched the devoted sons of men, and by compleatly answering every demand of the violated law against us, restored the harmony of the universe, and entered the salvation of the whole human race. Impressed with a full belief of this great consoling truth, a deviation from rectitude, from love, from universal charity, is impossible: It will inspire us with a compassionate and tender spirit to commiserate and relieve those who in the days of their misfortunes are forgotten by the world, this with every act of philanthropy we shall then consider as an indispensible duty, and the heart of sensibility will feel an ample compensation by the secret endearment which nature has annexed to all our sympathetic sorrows.

☞ THE Public are hereby informed that a Post is established from Newport direct to Boston, through Bristol, Warren, Dighton and Taunton—The Mail to leave Newport every Tuesday Morning, at Six o'Clock—to be at Boston on Wednesday at One o'Clock in the Afternoon—To leave Boston every Thursday at Eleven o'Clock in the Forenoon—and to arrive at Newport every Friday at Six o'Clock in the Afternoon—Every Command from the commercial Character will be attended to (by the Post Riders) with Fidelity and Despatch.

ADMONITORY.

WHEN the "Prince of Peace," the great and good Author of Chriſtianity, was queſtioned about the principles of Religion, he declares it to be founded on Love itſelf: "By this ſhall all men know that ye are my diſciples if ye have love one to another." When aſked whether a man was obliged to forgive his brother more than ſeven times? "I tell you," ſays our Lord, with emphatic vehemence, "more than ſeventy times ſeven." When his diſciples, heated with a little of that ſpirit which has blazoned out ſo furiouſly ſince in their unworthy ſucceſſors, wanted to call down fire from Heaven upon the unhoſpitable and heretic Samaritans, our Lord mortified their blind zeal with this reproof, "ye know not what manner of ſpirit ye are of; for the ſon of man is not come to deſtroy men's lives, but to ſave them." The examples of unlimited love and forbearance which, in the ſacred writings, are given of our beneficent Redeemer, ſhould ever influence us in our deportment to one another:

Ever reflecting with gratitude on that love which was ſtronger than death, and which from impending ruin ſnatched the devoted ſons of men, and by compleatly anſwering every demand of the violated law againſt us, reſtored the harmony of the univerſe, and enſured the ſalvation of the whole human race. Impreſſed with a full belief of this great conſoleing truth, a deviation from rectitude, from love, from univerſal charity, is impoſſible: It will inſpire us with a compaſſionate and tender ſpirit to commiſerate and relieve thoſe who in the days of their miſfortunes are forgotten by the world, this with every act of philanthropy we ſhall then conſider as an indiſpenſible duty, and the heart of ſenſibility will feel an ample compenſation by the ſecret endearment which nature has annexed to all our ſympathetic ſorrows.

☞ THE Public are hereby informed that a Poſt is eſtabliſhed from Newport direct to Boſton, through Briſtol, Warren, Dighton and Taunton—The Mail to leave Newport every Tueſday Morning, at Six o'Clock—to be at Boſton on Wedneſday at One o'Clock in the Afternoon—To leave Boſton every Thurſday at Eleven o'Clock in the Forenoon—and to arrive at Newport every Friday at Six o'Clock in the Afternoon.—Every Command from the commercial Character will be attended to (by the Poſt Riders) with Fidelity and Deſpatch.

GODS! life's your gift; then season 't with such fate,
That what ye meant a blessing prove no weight.
Let me to the remotest part be whirl'd,
Of this your plaything made in haste, the world;
But grant me quiet, liberty, and peace;
By day what's needful, and at night soft ease;
The friend I trust in, and the the I love;
Then fix me; and if e'er I wish remove,
Make me as great (that's wretched) as ye can;
Set me in power, the woful'st state of man;
To be by fools misled, to knaves a prey;
But make life what I ask, or take it away.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN.

A LADY who is a strong advocate for the Rights of Women, being lately engaged in dispute with a Gentleman, affirmed, that an army of women would be in every respect competent to take the field against an army of men, adding, "Suppose I was commander of 1,000 women, each of whom had a military education, and you of 10,000 men, how would you get an advantage that you might not have in an equal degree over an army of men?"—"Madam" replied he, "I would keep from a general engagement—I would make propositions of peace, and during the treaty the male and female officers and soldiers must frequently meet to settle the conditions, and at eight or nine months, when all of you ought to be in the field, you would be in the straw."
